Action 4 Child Protection

Florida Department of Children and Families Case Review February 2016

Review Completed by Action for Child Protection

Sun Coast Region Overview

Date: 2/11/2016

Overview and Method

Action for Child Protection, Inc. completed a case record review requested by the Florida Department of Children and Families to assess the implementation of the Florida Safety Methodology. Cases were randomly selected from three regions in Florida and the sample was provided to Action for Child Protection. Cases were reviewed off-site by Action staff utilizing Qualtrics survey software and FSFN access provided by the Department.

This report provides:

- Summary of key findings for the five main focus points of the review: Present Danger, Information Collection, Impending Danger, Safety Determination and Safety Planning.
- Data profile for cases reviewed within the Sun Coast Region for CPI.

Sample Size: 26 Assessments

Present Danger Assessment

Data Summary

- Total of 10 (38%) cases were identified by the review team case information indicated present danger.
- Total of 10 (38%) cases were identified by the worker indicated present danger.
- This resulted in a difference of 0 (0%) cases between the review teams identification of present danger and the worker identification of present danger. This represents a decrease in discrepancy of 7% since the July 2015 review.
- Total of 3 (12%) cases identified as not having information in the present danger assessment or case record to indicate an assessment of present danger was concluded. During the last review there were no cases identified as not having information to support or negate the present danger.

Strengths

- There were several cases where the present danger assessment provided specific detail regarding the CPI assessment to support the assessment.
- Cases where present danger was identified, the threats identified by the worker were aligned with the threats identified by the review team.
- When present danger was identified the present danger plan was noted to be sufficient to control the danger.

Areas for Consideration

- In some cases, the assessment of present danger did not consider the total household composition and assessment of all family members within the household.
- In some cases, the assessment of frequent home visitors and prior history with the agency was not considered during the assessment of present danger.

Orange Represents Data from February 2016

Information Collection

Data Summary

- 67% of the cases reviewed were found to have sufficient information collection in at least one or more domains.
- 50% of the cases reviewed were found to have sufficient information collection for all six domains.

Strengths

- Information collection for child functioning, parenting general, parenting discipline, maltreatment, and nature of maltreatment were similarly rated for sufficiency (63%-75%).

- The majority of cases were found to have sufficient information for five of the six domains.
- The majority of cases reviewed were found to have adequate and good quality information.

Areas for Consideration

- Adult functioning continues to contain insufficient information. The overall assessment for sufficiency for adult functioning domains was 50%.

Orange Represents Data from February 2016

Impending Danger Assessment

Data Summary

- Total of 11 (44%) cases were identified by the review team as impending danger.
- Total of 11 (44%) cases were identified by the worker as impending danger.
- This resulted in a difference of 0 (0%) cases between what the review team identified as impending danger and the worker identified as impending danger.
- Total of 5 (19%) cases were identified by the review team as not containing sufficient information to determine impending danger.

Strengths

- Cases were information was determined to be of good quality and sufficient supported the identification of caregiver protective capacities and the danger threats.

- When danger threats were identified, high degree of consistency with review team in the identification of an accurate danger threat.
- Decrease in disparity regarding decision making since last review in July 2015.

Areas for Consideration

- In some cases, it was noted that the information collection was not sufficient to explore the impending danger threat and CPC's. In particular, there were cases where collaterals were not contacted and focus was on the incident versus the family condition.
- In some cases, impending danger was not fully explored despite there being information in the FFA that the family condition may have crossed over the threshold. These cases appear to have relied upon service referral as the mitigating factor to the family condition.

Orange Represents Data from February 2016

Safety Decision

Data Summary

- For all cases reviewed the reviewers found that 73% of the cases that were identified as safe by the worker were accurate.
- In 15% of the total cases reviewed (n=4), the review team was not able to identify if the safety decision (either safe or unsafe) was accurate based upon the information in the case record.

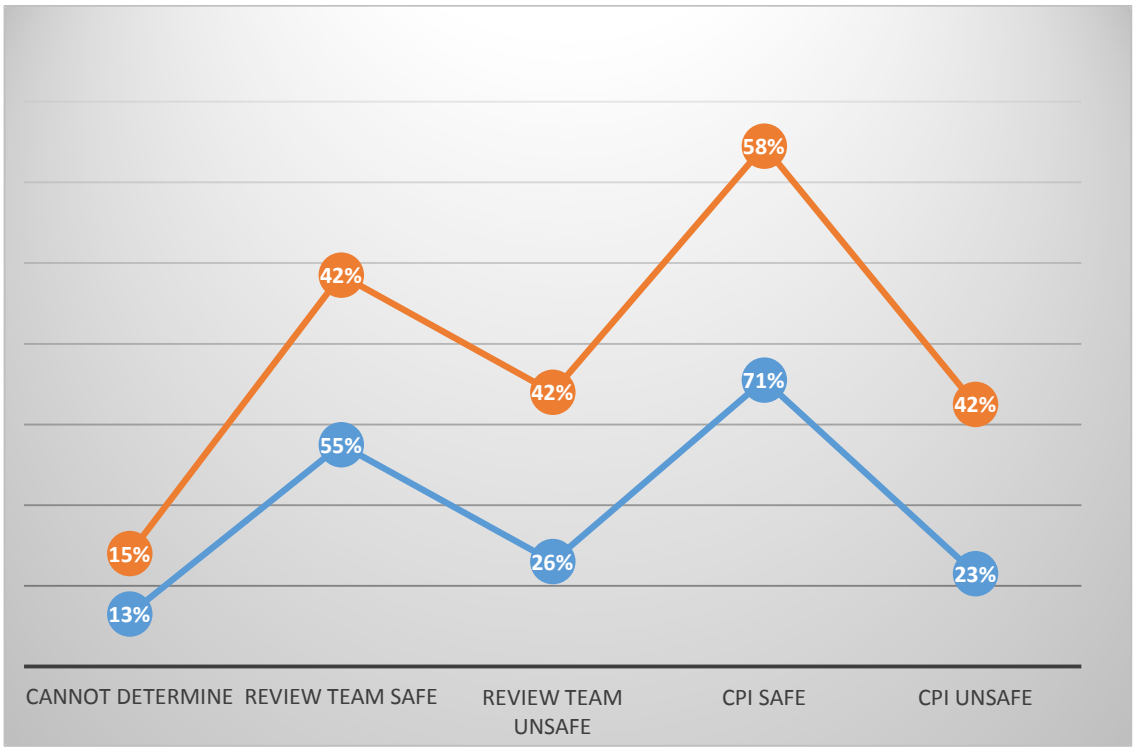
- The review team identified 11 cases where children were determined to be unsafe. The workers identified 11 cases where children were determined to be unsafe.

Strengths

- Several cases where information was sufficient, the safety decision was accurate.
- When children were found to be unsafe by the worker, there was a high degree (100%) consistency with the review team safety determination.
- There was a high degree of supervisor consultation noted within the case record to support the assessment process (88%).

Areas for Consideration

- For cases identified as being unable to determine the safety, this was due to the absence of information within the FFA and often times the lack of engagement with collaterals to support or refute information.



Blue Represents Data from July 2015

Orange Represents Data from February 2016

Safety Planning

Data Summary

- A total of 11 cases were reviewed for safety plans. In those cases, 82% were identified as having detail and sufficiency to control for danger threats.
- For applicable cases, conditions for return were logical, attainable, and relevant 55% of the time.

Strengths

- For cases where information was available, the safety planning analysis were supported.

Areas for Consideration

- Conditions for return were noted as a continued area of need, as approximately 45% of the cases where conditions for return were need, it was unclear if they were developed. This was often seen by the worker as restatement of the danger and lack of reconciliation of the safety planning analysis.

7. This section is concerned with evaluating the sufficiency of information for the six domains of information collection. Reviewers should be evaluating the information in the FFA in regards to the sufficiency criteria for each domain. Reviewer should select “YES” if information is clearly documented and sufficient for decision making within the Family Functioning Assessment . Reviewer should select “NO, information is present but not sufficient” if the concepts are noted in the Family Functioning Assessment but the information is not sufficient to support decision making. Reviewer should select “NO, information not present” if the worker did not include the concepts in the Family Functioning Assessment. This decision is based upon the review of the Family Functioning Assessment as recorded in FSFN by the CPI. Case notes are reviewed, however reviewer determination is based solely on FFA completed. Feedback notes should indicate if the case record either negated or supported decision making not otherwise reflected in the FFA.

8. This question is concerned with evaluating the assessment of caregiver protective capacities. Reviewer should select "YES" if information supports the identified caregiver protective capacities. Reviewer should select "NO, information is present but identified Caregiver Protective Capacities are not supported by the information. Worker may have selected caregiver protective capacities that are accurate, however may have selected others that are inaccurate or not supported by the information as being present, but rather absent. Reviewer should select "NO, information not present" to support the assessment of caregiver protective capacities when information is absent from the record to inform the caregiver protective capacities.

10. This section is concerned with evaluating the sufficiency of information for the six domains of information collection. Reviewers should be evaluating the information in the FFA in regards to the sufficiency criteria for each domain. Reviewer should select "YES" if information is clearly documented and sufficient for decision making within the Family Functioning Assessment . Reviewer should select "NO, information is present but not sufficient" if the concepts are noted in the Family Functioning Assessment but the information is not sufficient to support decision making. Reviewer should select "NO, information not present" if the worker did not include the concepts in the Family Functioning Assessment. This decision is based upon the review of the Family Functioning Assessment as recorded in FSFN by the CPI. Case notes are reviewed, however reviewer determination is based solely on FFA completed. Feedback notes should indicate if the case record either negated or supported decision making not otherwise reflected in the FFA.

7. Explain the reasoning for the family functioning assessment not being completed and reviewer analysis regarding the decision.

Text Response
Investigation was closed "patently unfounded".
Although there actually was an FFA completed, it was answered without contact with the child or mother. The child and mother were not able to be located so the answers to the FFA safety questions were answered as though the child was unsafe. The FFA was closed unable to locate. The documentation indicated that there were multiple attempts to locate the mother through many different avenues. There was also supervisory consults about the attempts to locate the family.
